Most patients experience no unusual effects from this injection. As with any procedure, however, a few risks are involved. During the injection, you may experience a warm sensation, nausea or vomiting. A few patients have an allergic type reaction with itching and hives (raised skin reactions resembling mosquito bites), swelling of the eyes and lips, sneezing, or difficulty in breathing. Medications are on hand to treat these conditions should they occur. In rare instances, more serious complications are encountered. These complications may include shock, kidney failure, and cardiac arrest. We have facilities to treat these reactions immediately. However, the risk of life-threatening reaction is extremely low (approximately 1 in 150,000 people). We will be happy to answer any specific questions you may have about the procedure, either before or at the time of the study.

I understand the procedure and give permission for the intravenous injection of contrast material.
